

Here are seven ways Teladoc Health virtual care services benefit employers:

- 1 Extending benefits to all employees. Every employee can have access to virtual care services – not just those enrolled in a health plan helping to create a barrier for spreading illness in the workplace.
- 2 Increased employee productivity. Employees receive health care where and when they need it most - at the early onset of an illness - which means they are quickly back to work. And consults can happen at the work place eliminating the need to travel to and from a doctor office.
- 3 Reduced absenteeism. Missed days are reduced by enabling employees and their dependents to receive care at the onset of symptoms so they feel better faster. Employees can get back to work and children get back to school or day care.
- 4 Improved presenteeism. On average, employees cost employers three months a year in lost productivity.* The convenience of our Behavioral Health Care allows employees to get the help they need and our Expert Medical Services provide peace of mind for employees and their dependents while reducing stress at work and home, leading to greater presenteeism on the job.
- 5 Performance reporting. Teladoc Health provides consultants with monthly and year-end utilization reports for each employer plan which can be used to educate employers and employees about their healthcare spending.
- 6 Recruitment and retention. Virtual care services stand out as a forward-thinking and progressive part of a benefit package.
- 7 Improved employer contribution cost. Teladoc Health services can be used as a strategic tool to encourage employees to move to a high deductible health plan allowing employers to reduce health plan contributions.

*According to a 2016 GCC Insights report by Global Corporate Challenge